Peria Duncan has written a general how-to guide for developing and implementing deflection and pre-arrest diversion programs up on our website!

CCN has added a world directory for deflection and PAD programs to their site, joining the Florida and national map directories, which is constantly being updated. To add your program, contact us at info@civilcitation.com. See a picture of our national map below, each interactive dot (on our page) represents one or many programs in each state. Clicking on the dots brings you to (a list) of programs where you can click on each one to go the particular program!

Juvenile activities (50)

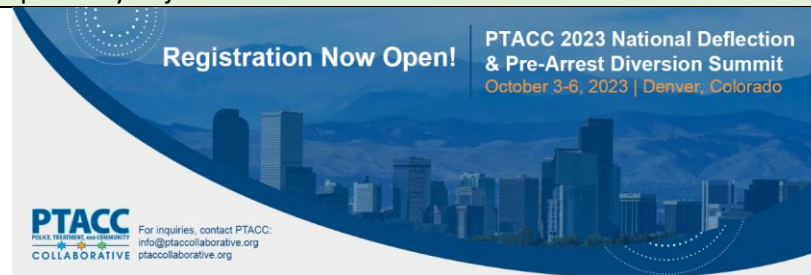

Civil Citation is available for training, consultation and technical assistance for your deflection or pre-arrest programs for juvenile and adults. We are also interested in collecting and posting data outcomes if you'd like to share! Our website is updated at least weekly with NOFO's, new articles, training opportunities, newly added national and international programs to our directories and more.

TRAINING TIPS:

Keep an eye on the events and training sections of our website for new conference dates, webinars, and other training opportunities! You are also welcome to share your deflection/PAD events on our website.

Share what you learn with others to help the field grow. Teaching also reinforces learning!

CCN will be presenting at the PTACC National Deflection and Pre-Arrest Diversion Summit in Oct. Ms. Duncan will co-present on a panel on "Reducing Arrests, Building Community," and Ms. Duncan and Mr. Olk will present "Reducing Arrests, Building Community (Juvenile Civil Citation Program.)" While geared towards juvenile programs and initiatives, much of what will be presented applies to adults, too, and we hope that you join us!

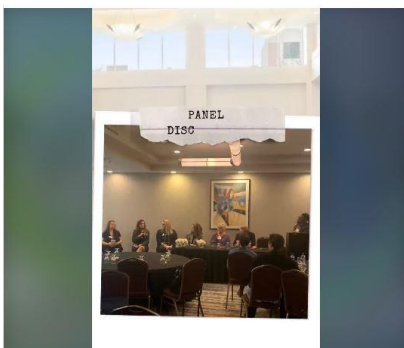

Registration for the Police, Treatment and Community Collaborative (PTACC) Annual Training Summit and hotels are open, as are sponsorship opportunities! Bring yourself or bring your team to beautiful Denver, Colorado! Fantastic agenda, packed with applicable information for new and returning attendees! Networking opportunities, team technical assistance and access to Subject Matter Experts (SME's)!

Juvenile Deflection and Pre-Arrest Diversion

A recent report indicated that results attributed to juvenile deflection programs were "astonishing" and cited programs such as the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice's Civil Citation program and the Cambridge Safety Net Program as two very successful initiatives. Important to note was a major part of their success was attributed to properly set up and maintained data systems and processes.

Another critical point was being sure to measure more than just recidivism, pointing out that other markers such as mortality rates, marriage rates and educational successes were just as important. Ms. Duncan attended the Convening on Deflection and Pre-Arrest Diversion in North Carolina sponsored by the Wilson Center for Science and Justice at Duke Law on June 29th. This well attended all-day event is connected to a National Governor's Association (NGA) project focusing on D/DPAD programs. It was geared towards those who are considering a program and for those who have started a program and highlighted initiatives throughout NC. There are several LEAD programs in NC!

Ms. Duncan attended the NCHATS (National Center for Health and Justice Integration for Suicide Prevention) In-Person meeting in Detroit this past April. As well as being part of the group discussion, she also participated as a member of an expert panel. NCHATS was established by Michigan State University, Henry Ford Health, and Brown University because about one death by suicide reported every 11 minutes in the United States and an increased risk of suicide in individuals involved in the justice system is a serious matter that must be addressed. Deflection and pre-arrest programs are growing internationally. This past May, the Rome Consensus 2.0 was held, with a full session devoted to deflection and pre-arrest diversion, advocating for humanitarian drug policies. PTACC Rome is the newest international PTACC chapter! Check out some of their work here: "Here is a tv news clip where Massimo clearly talks about deflection and diversion." https://www.romatoday.it/attualita/villa-maraini-ulivo-piantato-collaborazione-carabinieri-.html?fbclid=IwAR1slk_Xy-idbXt2XALaC0RcaS_T2NK8SA2nOluey25AolsFAXs-6Cr3YE
